inarket. The dullness of the trading and the narrowness of the fluctuations were in strong contrast to the violence of last week's movements, and even to the sudden recovery of yesterday. By the early afternoon the ticker had come practically to a standstill, and this traders were at a loss to know how to move prices sufficiently to offer good scalping profits.

The statement made by Mr. Harriman himself yesterday and the disposition manifest on the part of the press and the public to take him at his word and abate the eager show of concern about his condition seemed to remove the only factor having power at present to affect prices. The statement, however, was not left without some into ested comment. Though it had the effect of quieting apprehension of an immediate crisis in the financier's case, its admissions were sufficiently candid to prove a condition of health precluding present close attention to business affairs and leaving quite undetermined the possible duration of this enforced abstinence. ing quite undetermined the possible duration of this enforced abstinence. A report of an intended winter sojourn by the patient in a Southern climate gave a further suggestion to the situ-ation.

Even more interest attached to the Even more interest attached to the veiled allusion to the interest shown in his welfare by his friends, "and perhaps by some others." This passage was read in Wall Street in the light of persistent rumors that the recent upset in the stock market was due to underground machinations against the Harriman dominance itself and that developments in this self, and that developments in this matter were as much responsible for the financier's hasty return from abroad as the state of his health it-

With the partial obscuration of the Br.
Harriman topic, the effect was to call ittention to other possible agents in the downward turn in prices of stocks. The question arose whether the elimination of the matter of Mr. Harriman's poor health would have left the market capable of sustaining itself at the unstable level to which it had been pushed. The indecision of the buyers in following the advance which was established yesterday was very marked when the market opened, and not less so when the wider advances were established later. As the demand died out, prices yielded to pressure again, and more positive weakness was developed.

established later. As the demand died out, prices yielded to pressure again, and more positive weakness was developed.

The agricultural outlook received loser attention with the imminence of the government's monthly report on the cotton crop and the evidence that the crop has been going back during the past month. The various rivate restinates which appear in advance of the official report indicate an expeciation that a considerable deterioration will be shown. The Weather Bureau's weekly bulletin showed a continuance of conditions unfavorable for totton and corn, and weather news from the corn belt is considered of increasing importance as the period for the maturity of the crop approaches. The speculative mood created by these facts gave added influence to the warning note uttered by Chairman James J. Hill, of the Great Northerm, and by some of the Northwestern milling autholities, of a danger of overdistinating the volume of the present year's wheat crop. In another direction there is an expectation that the copper statistics for August will proveless favorable than for July. The falling off in the volume of cepper exports in that time points to such a conclusion. Some of the selling was supposed to be of stocks which were bought last week for purposes of supporting the market during its weakness, and which would be resold on the first advantageous opportunity in the natural course of things. The good earnings of the Harriman Pacifics for July were ignored.

The preparation for the September I money settlements were without effect in the call loan market, but the fone of time loan money grew still firmer. Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $2,926,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, August 31.—Predicted heavy arrivals of wheat at Northwestern grain centres falled to materialize to-day, and as a result the wheat market nere was strong, final quotations showing net gains of %61c. Corn and oats were also strong, but provisions closed barely steady.

Duliness and strength characterized grading in the wheat pit throughout the entire day. The market opened strong with priess up 46% to 26% c., and during the day further gains of about 46c. were annexed for all deliverles. The close was at almost the top figures. Arrivals to-day at Minnespolis and Duluth were 30 cars, compared with 556 cars the corresponding day a year ago, while the total primary movement lacked nearly 20% bushels, equaling that of the corresponding time last year.

Private estimates, which claimed a much smaller crop of corn than was indicated by the government report, were factors in a shurp advance in corn prices. The deferred months, the ones mainly affected by these reports, advanced ic from the low point of the day, while the Septembor delivery
